Mme. Gadski Picks World's Best Singers

Names Fourteen and Concedes First Rank Among the Tenors to Mr. Caruso.

(SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD.) PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Monday.—Nothing daunted by Mr. Andrew Carnegie's experience when he recently named the greatest men in the world, Mme. Johanna Gadski, the opera singer, who sang here this afternoon and at the Settlement Concert to-night, picked the world's all star opera team. She picked fifteen singers, but as she named herself among them she asked that her printed list be limited to fourteen.

Here they are, and Mme. Gadski said that some day she hoped to see them all together.

Mr. Enrico Caruso.
Mme. Lilli Lehmann.
Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink.
Mr. Pasquale Amato.
Mr. Clarence Whitehill.
Mr. Hermann Jadowitz.
Mr. Otto Goette.
Mme. Louis Homer.
Mr. Charles Dalmores.
Mme. Olive Fremstad.
Mme. Margarete Matzenauer.
Miss Geraldine Farrar.
Mr. Carl Burian.
Mr. Hermann Weil.

These singers Mme. Gadski selects as typical of everything great opera artists should be, and she declares have attained the pinnacle of glory in their respective lines.

Particularly did she praise the merit of Mr. Whitehill, American baritone, whose work in Wagnerian roles, she declares, has been one of the treats of the operatic season. She thinks Miss Farrar is one of the greatest of sopranos. That Mr. Caruso is the greatest tenor of the present day, Mme. Gadski admits.

Despite the fact that Mme. Lehmann now is more than sixty years of age, Mme. Gadski declares that the wonderful soprano was the greatest Brunnhilde that ever lived, and that even now she can sing the beautiful arias of Mozart in a manner unequalled.

Plays Americans' Descriptive Music

Barre Ensemble Makes Mr. Howard Brockway's "Eclogue" Feature of Its Programme.

The Barre Ensemble, consisting of wood wind instruments and two horns and led by Mr. George Barre, first flutist of the New York Symphony Orchestra, gave a concert in the Belasco Theatre yesterday afternoon.

New on the programme was the work of an American composer, an "Eclogue" by Mr. Howard Brockway. It is composed for two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons and is in two divisions. The first division is called "Twilight" and is a tranquil tone picture, here and there shot through by ruses of the flute and other instruments as if by sudden throbs of color in a fading sky. The second division, "An Idyl of Murmuring Water," is equally descriptive and deserves its title. The ending is a poignant little staccato. The entire "Eclogue" pleased the audience.

"Aquarelles Hollandaises," by Mr. Christian Kriens, a "Pastoral" suite by Bach arranged from the organ for the Ensemble by Mr. Archer Gibson, and Mons. André Caplet's "Suite Persane" were the other works on the programme.

MR. WITEK GIVES CONCERT.

Conductor of Philharmonic Orchestra Hears First Violinist of Boston Symphony Orchestra Play.

The Kapellmeister of the New York Philharmonic orchestra listening to the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony was the entire cordial de Bohème presented at Mr. Anton Witek's concert in the New Amsterdam Theatre yesterday afternoon, and accounted by the fact that both Mr. Stranisky and Mr. Witek, being in musical fellowship, are natives of Bohemia.

Mr. Witek, who is the leading violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was at his best in a group of three solos—Pugnani's "Prelude and Allegro," Tschakowsky's "Serenade Melancolique" and Wieniawski's "A major," "Polonaise." Among these he seemed most in sympathy with the "Serenade," which calls for heavy bowing.

Mme. Witek played Beethoven's pianoforte sonata, opus 57, in F minor.

Operate Upon Mr. Dillingham

Theatrical Manager, Long a Sufferer from Gall Stones, Submits to Surgeons.

Friends of Mr. Charles Dillingham were pleased last night to learn that the theatrical manager is speedily recovering his strength following an operation for gall stones last Friday at a private hospital on the west side. Within two weeks it is expected he will be able to return to his offices in the Globe Theatre Building.

For more than a year Mr. Dillingham has been suffering from the ailment and last spring went abroad for treatment at Carlsbad in the hope of being able to avoid an operation.

The rest and treatment seemed to have accomplished their object for he returned to New York last September Mr. Dillingham said he was in excellent health, and he looked the part. But a week ago, while directing a rehearsal of "Over the River" at the Globe Theatre, he again was taken ill, and on the advice of his physician, Dr. Otto Schwarzbacher, he decided to undergo an operation.

One of his friends said last night that the "nurse and companion now has become patient," meaning that Mr. Dillingham, who for several months has passed most of his spare time in the apartments of Mr. Charles Frohman, his close friend, who has been ill from rheumatism at the Hotel Knickerbocker, is now "laid up" temporarily.

PAY FOR INVENTOR OF CARTRIDGE BOX

Samuel McKeever Receives Remuneration for Equipment That Was Used by United States Army.

A very interesting case where a claimant against the government was finally successful in his efforts to realize some compensation was that of Samuel McKeever. He was an officer in the United States army in the seventies, says the National Magazine, and in 1878 he received letters patent for his invention of a cartridge box. It was a great improvement over the old style cartridge belt used in the civil war, as it had the advantages of protection from danger of loss and exposure to dust or moisture.

He submitted his invention to the War Department, and his use was adopted by the Secretary of War. It was immediately manufactured and used in the army, and upon the subsequent refusal to pay him any royalty for the use of his invention he started suit in the Court of Claims. Mr. McKeever based his case upon the ground of an implied contract, and the government based its refusal to pay him for its use on the theory that the box had been manufactured with the knowledge of Mr. McKeever, and that such manufacturing was not tortious, but permissible, inasmuch as the inventor had expressed no opposition to the project and no desire to be remunerated.

The government also contended that there had been no exclusive right of invention from the free use of the patented invention and cited a long line of English cases covering the point. Both of these defenses, however, were held to be void, and the Supreme Court sustained the decree in favor of Mr. McKeever without opinion.

FAT AND ALCOHOL BAD IN PNEUMONIA

According to Chicago Physician the Chance of Obese Persons or Drinkers Is One in Three.

Fat persons and heavy drinkers are afraid of colds and pneumonia. On the one hand, they are more subject to infection, and, on the other, infection is more dangerous to them than to lean persons or those who are habitually temperate. Their fears are justified. There is more than one reason for the hyper-susceptibility of these groups.

The human animal at best, says Dr. W. A. Evans in the Chicago Tribune, has not a capacious nose. Its passages are large enough in healthy children, but by the time adult life is reached certain bones are larger and the airway is smaller. In fat persons this normally small space is further encroached on by fat. Not being able to get enough air through the nose, they take in a good deal through the mouth. They are notorious snorers. Mouth breathers and part mouth breathers are more subject to colds than nose breathers.

Fat persons and alcoholics are badly out of nutritional balance, hence they are unduly subject to colds and pneumonia. What frightens them worse, these conditions go hand with them. When a person is fat his system is cluttered with an excess of food which is slowly away under the skin, around the heart, anywhere. When food and alcohol are taken together the alcohol is burned and the food clogs the tissues just as the oil burns out of a lamp wick and leaves the wick nearly as fat as it is.

When the obese or drinking man, or the two in one, finds himself with pneumonia he is poisoned by the toxins of pneumonia plus an embarrassing amount of food and drink but partly changed into compounds ready to clog tissues. Pneumonia at best is a hard fight. The fighting forces of the sick man hardly have a fair chance when they are further burdened by these encumbrances.

If the muscle fibres of the heart are obstructed by fat they cannot work as advantageously as when they are clean. And finally, the man who has learned to lean on alcohol has not much in reserve for this trial of strength. Obese persons and alcoholics do not have the same chance to recover from pneumonia as others. This does not mean that they stand no chance. It means that, instead of having a six-to-one chance, they have, say, a three or two-to-one.

GOING AFTER TRADE IN SOUTH AMERICA

Merchants Here Awake to the Fact of Good Markets in Spanish Speaking Countries.

"Not only do we expect a good year's business in our own country, but the United States is going to make great strides in exporting this year," remarked G. A. Harper, of Pittsburg, according to the Detroit Free Press.

"There has been a general awakening to the importance of the market in South America, to which little attention has previously been paid. The republics are growing, and they are consuming millions of dollars' worth of articles, the old world having been slow to realize the importance of this market and having enjoyed the profits thus far. American manufacturers did not go about it in the right way, but through suggestions by the consuls and the missionaries from South America they are starting in right by preparing to deal with a Spanish speaking people instead of Yankees."

Carefully prepared circulars in Spanish have been bringing replies, and in the instance of men who can speak Spanish going into the republics the results have been good. Manufacturers all over the country are planning to invade South America this year, and it is expected that the trade that will be created will grow in volume until it is very important to our industries."

There Are More Marys. Louisville Courier-Journal—"I see your daughter Mary has changed her name to Marie."

"She had, but she changed it back in a hurry the other day."

"Why the change back?"

"She read somewhere that all the Marys in the British Empire chipped in and gave Queen Mary $68,000 as a coronation present. She thought something of the kind might possibly happen to her some day."

Even Then. Puck—"Budding Israelitish Author—Then you think there is a chance for the unknown author to succeed?"

Old Israelitish Contributor—Surely! Why Deuteronomy was revised six times by many different editors, and Solomon's Song went the rounds of the music publishers in Shushan for years."
